ABOUT US

Maison Escher Group is a network of modern apartments distributed on the territories of Atrani, Amalfi and Pogerola.

Immersed in the scents, flavors, and colors of the Divine, our Maison welcomes every year guests who are attentive to details, passionate about contemporary art and the Greco-Roman world.

We have transformed our apartments into all-round experiential devices, inserting inside them paintings by emerging local artists, ceramicsof the best Vietri tradition, and giving them names that refer to the mythical toponymy of these territories.

We are convinced that the collective and cultural memories of places should be protected and eternalized now more than ever. Maison Escher group is a sensibility towards these memories, an enhancement of the territory, a cult of hospitality. We look forward to seeing you

Casa Seirenes

ATRANI

---

νησίδια τρία προκείμενα ἔρημα πετρώδη, ἃ καλοῦσι Σειρῆνας

Three rocky, uninhabited islets ahead that they call Seirenes Strabo, Geogr., 1,2,12

*Seirenoussai, when the gulf was called Cumano, was the name of the promontory of Sorrento, also known as Athenaion and corresponding to today's Punta della Campanella; Seirenes were called the three nearby islets, deserted and stony, known today
as Li Galli. [...] The current Li Galli, recalling directly the image of the siren hybrid-winged, would be the modern reflection of the ancient Seirenes. [...] So Seirenoussai, the promontory, recalls the life of the sirens,
Seirenes, the islets, their destiny of stone.*

*Federico E., Seirenoussai o Seirenes. Una semplice nuance?
Strabone, le Sirene, Li Galli*

Casa Posides

ATRANI

*Libertorum praecipue suspexit
Posiden spadonem, quem etiam Britannico triumpho inter militares uiros hasta pura donavit*

Among the freedmen he particularly admired the eunuch Posides, to whom, after the triumph with the Britons, among the experts of militia, he gave the pure rod.

Gaius Suetonius Tranquillus, De Vita Caesarum Cl. 28.1.1

The emperor Tiberius bought the island (Capri) from the municipality of Naples and built twelve villas, in which he placed, as in a Versailles ante litteram, illustrious exponents of the Roman patriciate. On the wave of Tiberius, senators and equites built maritime villas along the coasts of Sinus Neapolitanus (Gulf of Naples) and Sinus Paestanus (Gulf of Salerno). Among these, the freedman Posides, enriched in the shadow of Claudius, would have built, according to Matteo Della Corte (1937), the villa of Positano. Positano itself should have named after Posides.

ATRANI

[...] The word "Metamorphose" itself serves as a point of departure. [...] each bird is transformed into a rhomb, and this gives rise to a second association of ideas: a hexagon made up of three rhombs gives a plastic effect, appearing perspectively as a cube. From cube to house is but one step, and from the houses a town is built up. It's a typical little town of southern Italy on the Mediterranean, with, as commonly seen on the Amalfi coast, a Saracen tower standing in the water and linked to shore by a bridge. [It is the town of Atrani.]

'The lectures that were never given', in Escher on Escher: Exploring the Infinite, 1989

FEATURES

The apartment can accommodate up to 6 people.

It has 1 double bedroom downstairs, 1 double bedroom upstairs, 1 sofa bed in the living room.

Casa Regina

---

That pretty little cove crossed by the joyful river Regina certainly attracted the attention of the Roman patrician. Perhaps a senator or a consul, who sailed on the sea already crossed by Odysseus and Aeneas and inhabited by the malicious sirens. Perhaps he was directed by friends in the not far villa of Positano or in that of Li Galli. Perhaps someone in Rome had told him to visit that coastline which from the Etruscan Marcina reached as far as Punta Campanella.

Di Vito Pinto

The river 'Reghinna' should derive from the ancient greek verb ῥήγνυμι which meant 'to break'. In fact, the river 'broke' and divided the region into the two villages of Maiori and Minori.
